

Dr. Erna Sif Arnardottir is the Director of Sleep Measurements at the Sleep Department of Landspítali – The National University Hospital of Iceland and a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Iceland. Currently she is the President of the Icelandic Sleep Research Society. She is the coordinator of the Early Career Research Network (ECRN) of the European Sleep Research Society (ESRS) and a member of the executive committee of the Assembly of National Sleep Societies (ANSS). Dr. Arnardottir is also the chair of the ANSS-ESRS task force „Beyond the AHI“. She has authored 27 published peer-reviewed paper and one book chapter. Her main research interests are the adverse physical effects of sleep disordered breathing from snoring to obstructive sleep apnea, the standardization of sleep measurements and scoring methods as well as the relationship between circadian rhythm and sleep.